2. Mr. Saunders stated that because there are wide variations in the estimates from year to year, this committee has been appointed to review this subject and to come up with a more meaningful criteria on which to base this report. The committee is also responsible for setting up guidelines in order that the preparation of the report from each agency will be uniform. These reports are used by the Bureau of the Budget, the President's Board of Consultants on Foreign Intelligence Activities and the House Appropriations Committee.

3. Mr. Nisonger raised the question of the basic problem being the pricing-out of the activity or whether everything is included in the report. [] replied that the Bureau of the Budget did have a list of definitions. The Bureau of the Budget in 1954 made a quick survey of all agencies and came to a series of criteria for the various agencies which were discussed with each agency pro and con. There were some changes made after the first discussions. The criteria is fairly clear but the problem is that in a great majority of this activity, there is no accounting spot at all.

4. [] stated that we would have to convince the people using these figures that they are only estimates. The Chairman stated that it is up to this committee to get together and agree on a uniform way to arrive at these figures and therefore, not be dictated to as to how to do this.

5. The subject of this report was discussed at some length and it was informally agreed that the title should be Foreign Intelligence. Also, the the wording of subject of/costs and obligations in this report is not consistent. Dr.

[] suggested that the title be "Intelligence on Foreign Areas Relating to the National Security". Mr. Churchill feels that State Department thinks the definitions are very broad.

6. [] brought out the fact that, because of rotation of personnel in agencies and the Bureau of the Budget, there is no consistency from year to year. Mr. Saunders stated that one purpose of this report was for the Bureau of the Budget to compare the costs of intelligence.

7. Mr. Saunders suggested that perhaps this report be prepared for the previous year rather than the present year and could be submitted to the Bureau of the Budget in October or November of each year. In this way, the costs could be used rather than costs for part of the year and obligations for the rest of the year.
